

What we are consulting on

Our proposal is for a new road which would connect the A2/M2 in Kent with a tunnel crossing east of Gravesend and Tilbury (known as Option C in the 2013 consultation), before joining the M25 between junctions 29 and 30.

There are three route options north of the river in Essex and two south of the river in Kent (shown on the map on the front cover).

Your views will inform the Government's decision on which route would be built. This decision is expected later this year.

Why the crossing is needed

For over 50 years, the Dartford Crossing has provided the only road link across the River Thames east of London. It provides a key route for local, national and international traffic.

It is one of the busiest roads in the country. It is already used 50 million times a year and traffic volumes are forecast to increase.

A new crossing is needed to reduce congestion at the existing crossing and support economic growth, including new homes and jobs in the region.
